Policy: Cataloging of titles on e-Readers

Policy justification: Institutions that catalog individual titles available on electronic readers (e.g., Kindles); and attach physical inventory records to the electronic bibliographic record for each title must copy the bibliographic record for each title to their IZ in order to indicate the location of the title.

Records that are not given a location in this way appear in other institutions' Primo instances as being requestable, leading to patron frustration and confusion, and create additional work for resource-sharing staff, who must manually review and decline each request. Additionally, it can cause bad matches for importing records when libraries use the "prefer record with the same inventory type" setting. It could cause a "true" print record to link to the electronic bibliographic record.
